

Ways to reuse and recycle your used electronic equipment.

- If it's in good working order, let friends, family or charities use them.
- Take advantage of the many online internet exchange sites, such as 2Good2Toss or Craig's List, so your item can be reused or remanufactured. Click here to view local options.
- The new E-Cycle Washington Program accepts certain electronics free of charge at local collection sites. To see what is accepted and where to take these items, please click here.
- For items not covered under the E-Cycle Program, or for hard-to-recycle electronics, please visit our resources page here.

Think before you buy—integrate sustainability into your next purchase.

- Do I need this, and do I need it now?
- Does this item suit my current needs?
- Can the product be upgraded or integrated with other items?
- What is the life of this product?
- How long will I be able to use it?
- What will I do with it if I no longer need it or it is no longer working?
- Can it be repaired?
